FIRST CHAPTER

All the world is a stage, and all the men and women merely players.

They have their exits and their entrances, and one man in his time plays many parts.

Second Chapter

The quality of mercy is not strained. It droppeth as the gentle rain from heaven.

They have their exits and their entrances, and one man in his time plays many parts.